

The older Iâ€™ve gotten, the more like Dad Iâ€™ve become. I often find myself sitting at our kitchen table doing what Dad used to do. I can see him in my behavior. Now that heâ€™s gone, I donâ€™t mind being a smaller version of him. I know I am and I hope that Iâ€™ll be even more like him as I mature. What Dad taught me has made me better than had he not done so. And I want to share those lessons with you as a tribute to him and our family, and hope that these lessons make other families as great as ours. What youâ€™re about to read are not â€œlessonsâ€• from Dad in the sense that he sat down with me and said, â€œHereâ€™s what you have to do, Bob.â€• We never had even one of those types of conversations. But all that I learned from him was from his modeling what a good man does. He never really told me much, but he showed me A LOT! We cannot teach character. We cannot teach leadership. The best we can do is show it. People will then follow. If we want to make a positive difference in our families and our lives, example will be everything! ~Bob Vasquez
